

Celebrate innovations in learning.

Writing e-learning materials isn't an easy task. The use of computer and web-based instruction is growing, and so are your efforts to make those training materials accessible to readers.

Recognition for a job well-done is important. Especially when your instructional materials assist students across the globe.

As part of a joint endeavour with Training Magazine to encourage excellence in the field, Macromedia is helping to advance e-learning with their quarterly eLearning Innovation Award Program.

Winners of the eLearning Innovation Award Program receive computer equipment and software, as well as recognition in well-known training conferences and magazines.

Macromedia is passionate about what the web can be. Recognition and support for those who excel in e-learning is a key part of making sure the web continues to expand.

Your innovations are important to everyone.